Title IX at Bellin College

Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 is a federal civil rights law that prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex in federally funded educational programs and activities. Title IX prohibits sex discrimination in all College programs and activities including, but not limited to recruiting, admissions, financial aid, academic programs, student services, counseling, discipline, roster assignment, grading, and employment.

Title IX is commonly thought of as pertaining only to athletics. However, the law is actually much broader. Title IX prohibits gender discrimination in all programs and activities of a college or university.

What does Title IX cover?

- Sexual violence
- Sexual harassment
- Gender discrimination
- Retaliation for reporting acts of discrimination listed above

What do you need to know?

- If you or someone you know at Bellin College has experienced any of the prohibited behaviors listed above, you have the right to file an internal complaint with the College.
- There are resources and support available to all Bellin College community members.
